AMUSEMENTS. English's-"Lucia" and "Cavelleria." A fashionable audience was that at English's last night, bent on the pleasure of hearing the first grand opera in Indianapolis for many years, The people got a double portion, both "Lucia" and "Cavelleria Rusticana" being sung by the Tavary company. The performance was strong as a whole, the work of the individual artists superior and at times thrifling. Aside from the singing of Mme. Tavary and Chevaller Guille, Donizetti's one-time brilliant little opera did not strike the audience, perhaps, as anything startling. Just exactly what was expected cannot be surmised easily, but it is certain the audience was not responsive, and without some considerable show of sympathy, grand opera singers are not at their best. After Mme. Tavary's mad scene in the third act, where the famous cadenza with flute obligato furnishes a thrilling climax to a dramatic act, there seemed to be an awakening of enthusiasm that rose to a furere almost in the last act after Chevalier Guille's remarkable effort. Mme. Tavary may still claim prestige as sterling dramatic soprano, competent to of those who lean to robust opera. and cadenzas seem little more than pastime to this extraordinary singer. It is not meant that she has a phenomenal soprano organ, but any woman who can sing as Tavary is extraordinary. With her years of experience and faced by a cold audience it is not surprising that she should seem at times mechanical. Albert Guille came in the nature of a

It was nearly 11 o'clock when the orchestra struck up the overture to Mascagni's seautiful opera "Cavalleria." The opera house was so cold that the men had put overcoatsz and the womheavy wraps but all felt repaid for the long wait. Gladys Wallis in "The Cricket." There was a good-sized audience at the Grand last night to welcome little Gladys. Wallis in that old favorite, "Fanchon," which is being called "The Cricket." The bright little star took the house by storm from her first entrance. Youthful as she is, it cannot be said that she has begun her starring any too young. There is a winsomeness, girlish vivacity about her that contains much of the magnetic qualty necessary for a successful star and enables her to rise to heights of acting never the occasion demands. The story this old play is familiar to all save the younger of the theater-goers. Miss Wallis, who is well remembered for her conscientious work with Crane, shows that hardly possible that a woman with so much grace, chic and such attractive per-sonality generally, should fail in her ambi-tion to rival the great Maggie Mitchell. cannot witness her performance of hette and go away wishing her any-

Frederick Paulding furnishes heroic support to the talented star, making the most of his "fat" role of Landry Barbeaud. The veteran McClannin, who played the original Father Barbeaud over thirty years ago, to Maggie Mitchell's Fanchette, looks and acts the part with great faithfulness. McClannin carries his years well and hardly suggests being a man of such ancient experience. The comedy element is well handled and the large cast throughout gives Miss Wallis excellent support.

Minnie Seligman to Leave the Stage. NEW YORK, Oct. 25 .- The Morning Advertiser says that Robert Livingston Cutting, who married Minnie Seligman, the actress, and was disinherited by his father in Mr. Cutting's will, has effected a reconciliation with his family. The young man and his wife are traveling in Europe with his mother and it is said that Minnie Seligman Cutting has promised to leave the stage and that Mrs. Cutting will leave most of her fortune to her son.

Notes of the Stage. Arthur C. Aiston, business manager for Edwin Milton Royle and company, has been here arranging for their annual visit to the Grand the first half of next week, when they will produce Royle's new play, "Mexico," and the old favorite, "Friends." The Russell Brothers' Comedians are doing deservedly well at the Empire this week. At the night performances the rest of the week and Saturday matinee James Russell will impersonate Clara Morris in the mad scene of "Article 47," in lieu of the Bernhardt imitation.

Old-time patrons of the Park, who have seen every company that has appeared at that theater for years past, say there never was as complete and fine a melodrahever was as complete and line a melodramatic production seen in that house as "The Cotton King," which is running there all this week. Not only are the scenery and mechanical effects remarkable, but the company is quite in line with the elaborate manner in which the play is staged.

Englishmen Warned Not to Belittle the Sentiment of This Country on the Venezuelan Question.

LONDON, Oct. 21.-Mr. W. T. Stead has minster Gazette on "Monroeism," during men would do well not to belittle the significance of the ebullition of American sennt on the question of the Venezuelan frontier. It must be taken with the usual discount and is no doubt due to the system by which foreign affairs are discussed by bawling journalists rather than by suave diplomats, but it is serious nevertheless. Its gravity consists in two facts, neither of which has anything to do with the merits of the question in dispute. In the first place, for the first time since the civil war the Americans have built a navy of which they have some reason to be proud and which, sooner or later, they will use against somebody. In the second place, it is equally significant that the American press assures the United States that the Monroe doctrine has been informally dopted as a national faith by the Amer-can people and a dispatch sent to the New York World (referring to the reported ayard-Salisbury interview) probably has a

The Chronicle says: Needless comment has been made on Embassador Bayard's absence from Lord Salisbury's usual Wednesday reception at the Foreign Office. No discourtesy was intended. Mr. Bayard, in accordance with the diplomatic custom, awaits Lord Salisbury's answer to his dispatch regarding Venezuela, and does not need to personally attend until the answer is forthcoming. Lord Salisbury will possibly send an answer to-day. Perfectly friendly relations exist between the two.

Alaska-England's Claim. SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 24.-The agitation of the Alaska boundary question has been taken up bodily by the American residents f Juneau, and a move is now being made o form a boundary club at that place to keep the people and the government fully alive to the danger of losing the rich Yukon mines. As already indicated, the war cry, "Ten marine leagues or fight!" is being sounded. The situation is given by G. Swinehurt, editor of the Alaska Mining Record, at Juneau, who is now in this city.

Once a National Game.

Washington Post. Baseball is now our national game, but Louis A. Klemm remembers a time when all the world played ninepins. Athletic sports are not described in the oks of the bureau of education Klemm has gathered his fact about nineins from a study of circumnavigation. To circumnavigate the globe he leaves to explorers, but to circumnavigate the law is a universal custom, he declares, and he has interested himself in marking the andings which are made during the winding voyage. He knows all the early history of ninepins, and he tells the reason why the game n America evolved, after a while, into tenpins. An attempt to circumnavigate the law was at the bottom of the change, of course. The Americans have a knack getting around restrictions, so says popular game of ninepins, which was played in every country, became too pop-ular in our own young land, and led to betting and gambling. There were strict blue laws in those early days. They may not have reached from Connecticut to New fersey, but certainly New Jersey's Legisature placed a statute on its records prohibiting ninepins altogether. And then, says Dr. Klemm, the people circumpavigated. They got around the law, and they still played their game, for they added one pin to the nine and named the new game tenpins.

FRANKFORT, Ind., Oct. 24.-The little own of Pickard's Mill, otherwise called Tail Holt," Clinton county, mentioned in James Whitcomb Riley's verse, was visted by a fire at 2 o'clock this morning and ries near Bloomington the business part of the place destroyed. The losers are: M. Boulden, general store, $2,000; postoffice, $200; broom factory, $300. The residence of George Robins, the village justice, and the residence of Mrs. Nancy Pickard, the oldest house in the county, standing nearly seventy years, also burned. Mrs. Robins, aged sixty years, had a narrow escape from death. When she awoke she found the stairway barred with flames and, rushing to the second-story window, raised it and jumped. "Jim" Sexston, the village clown, is a hero to-day. He was standing beneath and when he saw the frightened woman make the desperate leap he braced himself and caught her in his strong arms without allowing her body to touch the ground. The day that Riley visited "Tailholt" he was with a companion in the sign painting business. He was on his way from Frankfort to Tipton and stopped at the old grocery that burned this morning. ### INDIANA OBITUARY.

Judge Hewit L. Thomas, at the Advanced Age of Minety. Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

GALVESTON, Ind., Oct. 24 .- Judge Hewit L. Thomas, aged ninety, died at noon today. He awoke this morning apparently as well as usual. About 9:30 o'clock he had a stroke of paralysis, and never regained consciousness. His son Meredith and grandbildren were at his bedside.

A telegram was sent to his younger son, Dr. William H. Thomas, at Indianapolis, also to his elder son, General M. T. Thomas, at Mankato, Minn. He revived somewhat at 11:30 o'clock, but did not recognize any of the family. About twenty minutes later he died. The funeral services will be held in the Baptist Church, Friday after-

Judge Thomas was born in Tompkins county, New York, April 27, 1805, and removed with his parents to a farm in Payette county. Indiana, in 1819. Here he attended the district school during the winter months. At the age of eighteen he began teaching school. Two years later he entered college at Oxford, and at the end of five months he again returned to the farm. In 1828 he began a subscription school in Harrison township, Fayette county, but at the end of a year's successful teaching was compelled to give it up on account of his father's failing health. In 1836 he moved to Noble township, Cass county, where he was elected a justice of the peace, which office he resigned in 1840 to accept the associate judge-ship with the Hon. Horace P. Biddle, of Logansport, who was then circuit judge. In 1847 he was re-elected, and served in all ten years. In 1853 he took his family to Minnesota, where he engaged in the lumber and merchandise business. In 1856 he was elected to the Minnesota State Senate, and in 1858 to the State Legislature and re-elected in 1860. In 1833 he was appointed by Lincoin as one of three commissioners to appraise the lands owned by the Winnebago

In 1865 he returned to Indiana, settling at Galveston, where he retired to private life. Later he engaged with the Continental Life Insurance Company, and proved an efficient ent until the company went to the wall. He then engaged with the Northwestern Mutual, of Milwaukee, and looked after their interests up to the time of his death Judge Thomas was married to a Kentucky girl in 1826, and to this union three children were born. Minor T., who enlisted in the late rebellion as a lieutenant and rose to the rank of brigadier general, Meredith H., who has been engaged in the grain and merchandise business at this place for thir-ty years, and Dr. William H. #### THE STRIKE AT CLINTON. Purcell Wants Factory Hands to Boycott Clinton Coal.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Oct. 24.-The officials of the United Mine Workers believe the operators in the Clinton district are trying to disrupt the organization. The operators are putting men at work at day wages of $1.80 a day. The miners have been out on a demand for the State scale of cents a ton. The operators say they had contract with the organization which was violated by the men, and that hereafter they will not recognize the United Mine Workers in making terms for work. They insist, however, that they have no objection to their miners belonging to the order. President Purcell will try to cripple the Cliaton operators in the sale of their coal by asking men in factories not to work if the Clinton coal is used: Secretary Kennedy is urging the Clinton miners to accept no com-promise. He has issued an address, in which he warns miners to stay away from Clinton. As to competition with the cheaper-mined coal of Grape Creek, Ill., he says the Clinton operators have been com-peting with Grape Creek for years and have made money. He points out that other op-erators are paying the State scale and ship-ping coal through Clinton and Grape Creek

King's wife is a very pretty woman, and, it is alleged, had been meeting the 'Squire in secret for some time.

Obstructionists Removed.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. FORT WAYNE, Ind., Oct. 21-A sensation was sprung to-day by the removal of Levi Griffith from the Board of Public Works, of which he was a member. Mayor Oakley gives as his reason that Griffith did not harmonize with the other members of the board. Immediately following the removal Willis Hattersley, the only Democratic member of the board, tendered his resignation. It has not yet been accepted by the Mayor. Tids leaves only one member, DeVilbiss. The trouble arose over the granting of street car franchises, the Mayor and DeVilbiss being in favor of a grant, while the other two demurred. They signed the street-trucontract and franhise. When it went to the Council las Tuesday evening they virtually killed the franchise by referring it back to the Board of Public Works without a dissenting vote. This precipitated the cupture. The Mayor says he has selected two new members, but will not give their names yet.

The Big Four train was met at a station northwest of Greensburg by Mr. Will Ehrhardt, one of the committee chairmen. His white cap told his mission, and he greeted the delegates in a friendly way. At the station the train was delayed several min-utes beyond schedule time by the dismounting arrivals. Many had to stand up. The reception committee and the escorts at once took charge of the arrivals and led them to headquarters, so that they might regis-ter. Miss Masson and the State officials were assigned to the Seitz Hotel. This will be the official headquarters of the officers and speakers. The place of registration is at the Presbyterian Church, a block or two distant. Here there was a bevy of hand-some young women ready to take the names and make the assignments arranged. They wore the white caps, with the nature of their function printed upon the band. An information bureau was already in operation in one of the class rooms. The preparations were seemingly complete, being on the plan of conventions in larger cities, but only less in scale. The chairman of the general committee is Will J. Dobyns, the vice chairman Milt Parsons, the secretary Miss Reina Stevens and the treasurer Miss Florence Pierce. The finance committee has Mr. Ehrhardt for its chairman, the accommodation committee, Miss Stevens; press committee, Mr. Wooden; reception, Miss Jessie Donnell; music, Mrs. R. M. Thomas; hall. R. T. Wright; decoration, Charles S. Williams, and of ushers, George L. Roberts. Ten of the reception committee were de-tailed under Harry abount to act as "scouts," their duty being to meet dele-gates on the incoming trains before reaching Greensburg.

WHAT GREENSBURG HAS DONE. Short Talks About Preparations and the Convention.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal GREENSBURG, Ind., Oct. 24.-Mr. Will J. Dobyns, chairman of the general commeeting of the convention:

"Everything is now in readiness and the returned a verdict of manslaughter against | indications point to a very successful conhas entertained this convention, and if we succeed in our effort our success will be due to the united pull of the entire population. It was an ambitious attempt of a town of this size, but such has been the spirit shown that at this time I apprehend no danger of failure. Our homes have been thrown open, so that we are able to care for from 1,000 to 1,200 delegates. The officers of the State committee have informed me that we may look for that number. Our speakers and singers have arrived. Our choir of 350 voices has been trained by local leaders, and will be directed by Mr. Excell. The organization in preparation for this convention has occupied our serious thought for a year, and in all 350 workers in the church, social and business circles of our town have been occupied in it. We have spared neither labor nor expense, so far as our abilities lay, to make the convention a success. What has been accomplished shows what the churches united can do. One of the features of the convention will be the daily libble readings by President Burdaily Bible readings by President Bur-One of the indefatiguable Christian Endeavorers of the State is the energetic young weman of slight sature who holds the office of secretary—Miss Masson, of Indianapolis. roughs, of Wabash College. bound to be a success," she said. "The people of Greensburg have made a mighty effort and have shown a spirit of energy and Christian spirit worthy of a much larger town. The convention may not be so large as some that have been held in the past, but it will be a convention with large results. It seems to me. Conventions in larger cities have had the aid of other attractions, but this convention is one for work. It begins, it seems to me, with a spiritual promise exceeding any previous convention. We seem to breathe the esence of spirituality already, and I believe that revivals will spring up all over the State with splendid results for Christ and the church, as a result of this convention. The C. E. movement is becoming stronger every year. It is true, perhaps, that we do not bubble as much as we used to do, but the interest is just as intense. The society is going through a period when work is not so much how to grow, but how to find and apply better methods of Christian duty. The keynote of the coming year, it seems to me, is how to help others. The society must seek to become more and more spir-itual, now that it is established firmly. There is yet room, however, for growth in the State, though the junior societies alone number more than the senior societies in number more than the senior societies in some States. The society has shown a marked advance during the year in missionary lines. The State officers could find meetings for a hundred more speakers, and the attendance at every meeting is something very unique in number. Our meetings, of course, are not the old-fashioned, stiff-necked kind, but, with young enthusiasm, they have been made attractive beyond anything ever seen before. The State union was begun eight years ago at a meeting of forty Indiana delegates at the Philadelphia national meeting, and the first convention was not largely attended. There are now 74,625 members in the State, as against 67,000 last year. There were 1,340 societies in 1894 and 1,665 societies in 1895, an increase of considerably over 200. The junior societies number 519. The movement is reaching out into communities that have several small churches of different denominations, so that, with the interdenominaseveral small churches of different denominations, so that, with the interdenominational spirit of the Christian Endeavor, it is easy to induce the young people of the churches to unite and form one Endeavor meeting. The society thus grows stronger every year, and no one has ever been able, so far as I have heard, to detect any threatening source of weakness. There is a great future of usefulness for Christ and the church for it."

tending the convention. Dr. Sims was his The officers of the State union, of the local union and of the local committee met yesterday afternoon for prayer and conse-cration of the convention.

Richmond sent a delegation to secure the next convention. It consists of John H. Johnson, representing the business men; Rev. M. M. Binford, of the Friends' Church, Rev. M. M. Binford, of the Friends' Church, representing the ministers, and Oliver P. Nusbaum, representing the Christian Endeavor societies. The Richmond people say that on a former occasion they withdrew in favor of Muncie, and think a return of the favor would be the graceful thing now. But Muncie is very earnestly seeking the convention for next year. Logansport is the third applicant. The town is plastered with signs bearing the names of these cities with the figures '96 after them. The ies with the figures '96 after them. The Logansport people proceeded to "paint the town red" by implanting the watch cry. "Logansport, '96," on every stone crossing on the principal streets in bright red paint.
